Port Authority Will No Longer Honor Expired Parking Passes

Virgin Islands Port Authority Executive Director Carlton Dowe announced today that, effective immediately, the Authority has discontinued the practice of honoring expired parking passes. The expired passes had been issued over the years to over 100 individuals who were once Port Authority board members, employees, government officials and other private citizens. Dowe said that these individuals will now be required to pay to park at all of the Port Authority's paid parking lots at the agency's seaports and airports territory-wide.

Dowe added that VIPA's parking lot attendants and supervisors have been given strict instructions to adhere to the Authority's parking lot policies. He also thanked the community in advance for their cooperation, patience and understanding while conducting business at the Authority's facilities.

Please contact VIPA's public relations office with any questions at (340) 774-1629 or E-mail info@viport.com.
